If you are looking to provide potential or even existing customers data from your company, then you should consider using a Branded USB . They are a very professional way of delivering your data and your brand. The look and feel are important, as is the packaging that surrounds it. That is assuming that you are providing it in a gift box. Otherwise, you just need to decide on the style of USB that you want to use, the storage capacity and the message that you want to put on it. There are many specialist companies that will print your logo onto a USB, and they will normally upload your promotional data as part of their branding process.
